

Beeswax Aging

Beeswax aging is a unique technique where the meat is sealed in natural beeswax to protect it as it slowly matures. Unlike regular cuts, this method helps retain moisture while allowing the meat to become more tender over time. The result is a juicy texture with a clean, rich flavor and a smooth, buttery finish.

Shio Koji Aging

Shio koji aging uses a traditional Japanese marinade made from fermented rice and salt. The natural enzymes gently break down the meat, making it more tender than standard preparations while enhancing its natural flavors. This process creates a delicate balance of savory umami and subtle sweetness.

Dry Aging

Dry aging is a classic technique where beef is aged in a controlled environment to develop deeper flavor and tenderness. Compared to fresh cuts, moisture loss concentrates the taste, while natural enzymes soften the meat. The result is a steak with a bold, rich flavor and a slightly nutty finish.
